Pastoral Ponderings

Wrestlings with The Commandments (Part 1 of 2)

I continue to wrestle with the Ten Commandments. Not the existence. Not that they are a word from God. Not the truth of them. My wrestle is with the understanding. When I was a child I thought like a child. As I grow those early thoughts often inhibit my ability to think clearly with my renewed mind. I am called to think more deeply and yet I often find myself in the knee jerk reaction of assuming that what I learned about God and the Bible as a child is necessarily true. Praise the Lord for these past four years which have taught me to look at God and the Scriptures in a renewed way. What I would call a God Only way. Not that God is the most important thing in my life. He is not the best thing in my life. He is the only thing in my life. (Now having said I believe this does not mean I carry it out very well) The interesting thing about this is that most often the old way was not wrong but just partial and incomplete. I suspect that in many areas where I now feel that I have a deeper understanding, I likely am still only scratching the surface of the depths of the wisdom and the love that is contained in these holy words from our eternal Father. There is now however comfort for me in this as we know that God can fill in wherever I lack and that His Spirit can guide us when words fail us.

So what is it that makes me wrestle with the Ten Commandments? Well I would have to say in the past it was my flesh that did not want to be told what to do. Thankfully I am a pretty good guy and I have not murdered or stolen too much. I get to church on Sundays (sometimes) and so all in all they shouldn't bother me right? Well it doesn't take a read too far into the new covenant to realize that the intent of the old was much deeper than controlling the actual actions. Lusting after a woman, wanting my neighbors stuff (Don't ask who is my neighbor cause it might just be anyone you stumble across that needs you and your possessions) being angry with anyone (yes that includes my children). Suddenly the Old Testament seems a whole lot more comforting. You know perhaps that is why many groups chase after rules and laws from the Old Testament. Give me a list. I can check it off and if it is not on the list and I want to do it for myself then all is good, right? The problem with this is that it is focused on what can I do for me that does not anger God, when we should be asking how can I live for God no matter what happens to me. This self-promoting understanding comes in many forms. We can even make it look good by saying, "I follow these laws because I love God and want to show this to Him." Does He who can see into the heart of man need to be shown our love by our outward actions? If we owe Him life and breath and our current pardon from instant death resulting from our sin, how many actions can prove we love Him more than our disobedience proves our self-love? And if I am trying to prove my love of Him to protect myself, how pure is that love really? So no matter whether it is the Ten Commandments or the Beatitudes, it cannot be about a list of things I must do. There must be something else. Something more. If this last five years has taught me anything it would be that there is always something more...

Opportunities to Serve

Backpack Program

The program is run by the Osceola Open Cupboard and provides backpacks of easy to fix food for children and their families for over the weekends when they don't have access to school meals. This ministry is vital to our communities and the children that receive these bags. This year New Life is collecting pouches of sides--think rice, pasta, muffin mix and brownies. Please consider helping collect these inexpensive items, and remember, it should be pouches so it fits in the backpacks easier. Also, the easier it is to make, the better (the "just add water" are perfect). Many times it's children preparing this food on the weekends. Thank you!!
